ANTH 1010.001 – Introduction to Anthropology (12494)
MoWeFr 10:00AM – 10:50AM  CHEM 106   J. Johnson

Introduction to Anthropology. 3 hours. Surveys and explains the cultural, linguistic and biological legacy of humankind, from antiquity to the present, using the research tools of anthropology. Anthropology is both a scientific and humanistic endeavor that attempts to explain the differences and similarities between and among human groups. Anthropology studies where people come from, who they are, what they do, and why they do it.

World Cultures Through Film. 3 hours. Through the use of ethnographic and documentary film, as well as lecture/discussion, this web-based course illustrates the life ways, values and beliefs of human societies throughout the world. This survey includes examples from native North America, Latin America, Australia, Southeast Asia, Africa, East Asia, Melanesia, Polynesia, modern North America and Europe.

Additional Notes:
This course uses the discipline of anthropology to answer the question: How should we view cultural differences? We will explore this question through the theoretical prism of anthropology and case studies provided by ethnographic films. Specifically, we will discuss (a) the problems with ethnocentric portrayals of different cultures in mainstream cinema (ethnocentrism); (b) how cultures see themselves (the emic perspective); (c) whether we can compare cultures to each other (etic perspective); and finally, (d) what happens when different societies interact with each other in a globalized world (globalization).

Culture and Society. 3 hours. Cultural anthropology is the social science that tries to make sense out of people’s lifestyles around the world, encompassing many subjects such as law, religion, politics, health, language, economics and globalization. It involves analyzing human ways of life with holistic, comparative, global, and relativistic perspective. As we compare and contrast different cultures around the world, we just as often analyze ourselves.

Introduction to Physical Anthropology. 3 hours. (3:2) Study of human biological evolution from primate beginnings to the present era. Emphasis is placed upon anatomical and physiological variations and their adaptive significance.

Additional Notes:
Same as BIOL 2700 and requires separate scheduled lab hours for this course. This is a first survey course in human evolution. The common themes, which unite all of the topics, are human origins and variation. The course begins with a brief review of the history of evolutionary ideas and proceeds to a discussion of genetic mechanisms of organic evolution. The second group of topics focuses on human variation and microevolution. The third segment of the course deals with the primate antecedents of humans and the living primate relatives of man. The course concludes with a survey of fossil human ancestry spanning the last 6 million years of hominid evolution.

American Culture and Society. 3 hours. Culture, cultural diversity and multiculturalism constitute some of the most significant social issues in America today. Oriented around the core concept of culture and cultural groups; designed to introduce the student to the basic concepts of culture and cultural diversity and develop an awareness and appreciation for the full range of diversity in the American (U.S.) culture. Special time and attention devoted to the origins, development and consequences of the diversity that plays such a central role in the lives of people in this nation-state culture.

Additional Notes:
We will boldly encounter and discuss realities of lived experiences in the United States. Although we may participate in and understand many facets of “American” culture, in this course we will be reconsidering culture and society in the United States through the holistic lens of Anthropology. The four+ sub-fields of Anthropology, and its emphasis on critical cultural relativism and social equality offers us a multi-focal framework through which we can situate our sociohistorical past, recognize continuing cultural patterns of the present, and begin to delve into interconnected social issues of the contemporary “American” experience.

ANTH 3300.810 – Peoples and Cultures of the Pacific (12834)
Internet Course        L. Henry

Peoples and Cultures of the Pacific. 3 hours. Surveys the diverse cultures and traditions of the Pacific, each with its own unique style and history covering thousands of years. Geography, politics, history, ethnography and economics of many cultural groups in the region, from the discovery of these islands to the present.

Additional Notes: This is an introduction to the peoples and cultures of the Pacific Islands. We explore the nature of indigenous island societies in the Melanesian, Micronesian, and Polynesian culture areas, focusing on social organization, economic and political systems, and religious beliefs. We then look at the transformation wrought in these societies by Western contact, missionary influence and colonial incorporation. Finally, we will examine how new Pacific Island nations are dealing with the problems of modernization and finding their own niche in the global system.

Internet Course        A. Nelson

Peoples and Cultures of South Asia. 3 hours. A survey of the culturally rich and diverse cultures and traditions of South Asia, each with its own unique history covering thousands of years. From the days of prehistory to the present period of profound social, economic, political and technological changes, this course provides an in-depth background and understanding of the peoples and cultures of this area.

Additional Notes:
This course covers the cultural region of South Asia, which includes the countries of India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Sri Lanka and the Maldives, and occasionally Afghanistan, Tibet, and Burma, as well as the large South Asian diaspora around the world. Through a study of the region’s geography and history, we start by un-thinking how South Asia is imagined in Western discourses as timeless, spiritual, poor and conflict-ridden. Then we shift to thinking about South Asia less as a place and more as a symbol of particular cultural responses to questions that all of humanity asks, such as: what does it mean to be a person? How should society be organized? What causes violent conflict? Finally, we end the class by asking what a South Asian perspective might teach us about life in the United States. In addition to reading academic texts, students will gain an appreciation for the region through films, literary fiction, and blogs.

TuTh      2:00PM – 3:20PM      LANG 314      A. Bass

Anthropological Field Methods. 3 hours. Concentrates on the field methods of anthropology, in particular the various data gathering techniques, methods of analysis and field techniques of participant observation. In addition to acquiring the skills of the participant observation method, students gain an increased awareness, understanding and appreciation of the problems associated with conducting research in cultures other than their own. Special attention is devoted to the interactional aspects of dealing with people from a variety of cultural backgrounds.

Additional Notes:
Dynamic introduction to field methods of anthropology, through exploration and discussion of essential readings that introduce various data gathering techniques and methods of analysis, as well as interactive training and local fieldwork experience. Together, we will develop practically applicable problem-solving skills and implement fundamental techniques for applied approaches to anthropological research.

ANTH 4210.001 – Culture and Human Sexuality (14566)
TuTh 3:30PM – 4:50PM GATE 137 J. Carrington

Culture and Human Sexuality. 3 hours. Examines sexualities cross-culturally in their specific historical, social, religious and political contexts to explore how that seemingly most natural aspect of humanity — sex — is structured and experienced very differently across the globe. A primary focus is how sex and sexuality are discursively constructed as a matter of utmost privacy, yet are paradoxically a matter of deep public concern. Examines the intimate connection between sex and the nation by exploring topics such as family planning policies, anti-sodomy laws, and laws against interracial marriages.

Additional Notes:
In this course, we will use a “queer” anthropological analytic to understand how that seemingly most natural aspect of humanity—sexuality—is socially structured and personally experienced very differently around the globe. We will analyze sexualities cross-culturally in their specific historical, social, religious, and political contexts to understand the culturally-specific meanings applied to sexual practices and identities in those contexts. In particular, we will focus on how sexual identities are socially constructed in the United States, and we will interrogate the intimate connection between sex, nation, and economy through the exploration of such topics as colonialism, immigration, same-sex marriage, and contemporary queer politics.

Language and Culture. 3 hours. Introduction to linguistic anthropology, designed to acquaint students with some of the ways in which languages and cultures are connected to each other, in that communication patterns are culturally structured. Three broad areas: how language offers resources to individuals to help them accomplish their goals; how language offers resources to institutions and social groups that help them maintain their power; and how language shapes our thought patterns. Students learn the basic techniques of analyzing conversations by working on a semester-long project.

Additional Notes:
The intersection of language and culture is dynamic, multifaceted, and has various effects depending on culturally bound social structures of power. This class will focus on contemporary multi-media sources, interactive analysis, essential readings, and discussion to explore the ways in which language and culture merge and diverge to create and reflect social cohesion, oppressions, and resistance. Students will gain an understanding of the inherent interconnectedness language has with culture, and the cultural power language can wield.

ANTH 4701.036 – Anthropology and Social Media Culture: Surveying the Self(ie) (14565)
MoWeFr       10:00AM – 10:50AM LANG 301   M. Nelson

Surveying the Self(ie): Anthropology and Social Media Culture. 3 hours. Selected topics of interest and significance in sociocultural anthropology. While this course is offered on a regular basis, particular topics are taught irregularly. Is our new virtual reality, where at the tips of our fingers news breaks alongside relationships, less a kind of freedom and perhaps more a prison where we obsess over how many “likes” our selfie gets, or whether or not to comment on a post by our ex-partner? This seminar asks, “How are we disciplined in managing our profiles in the world of social media?” Together as a class we will create a persona and delve into the waters of Facebook, Farmersonly.com, and other platforms in order to discuss anthropologically how we navigate our sociality, sexuality, politics, morality, and ultimately ourselves in the virtual world.
Additional Notes:
This seminar takes an anthropological approach to exploring the ways in which we navigate our social lives in a virtual world. The innovation of social media sites brought with it the freedom of unbounded sociality, where due to a single click you can gain, or lose, thousands or even millions of “friends”. Yet it is worth considering how this new "virtual culture" can encompass both an expanse of sociality, as well as a social prison, in which we enslave ourselves by the constant self-examination over how to display and manage our online profiles. Applying Foucault's theories on the "Panopticon", as elaborated within Discipline and Punish (1975), we will embody a social media persona in order to explore how we manage our friendships, sexuality, politics, morality, and ultimately our SELVES in the virtual world.

Sex, Gender and Culture. 3 hours. Selected topics of interest and significance in sociocultural anthropology. While this course is offered on a regular basis, particular topics are taught irregularly

Additional Notes: In this course, we will examine issues, debates, and perspectives important to understanding gender and sex through an anthropological lens. We will examine theories of the social construction of sex and gender, and analyze various cultural contexts to understand the different meanings people hold about the concepts we call “gender” and “sex.” The first half of the course offers a historical look at the development of feminist anthropology, focusing on important themes of study and debates within the field. We will also analyze the insights that feminist anthropology brought the study of anthropology as a discipline. In the second half of the course, we will apply the theories and concepts we have learned to “think like a feminist anthropologist” about topics related to sex and gender, including gender identities and practices across the globe, kinship and family, the body, sex work, and more. Throughout the course we will bring scholarly, activist, audio/visual media, fiction, and other forms of texts/writing together in conversation to understand how cultural meanings about gender and sex are transmitted, reproduced, and contested.
