“Why study the history of anthropological theory?” The answer is straightforward: the most effective way to understand anthropology today is looking at its past. To understand anthropology with sophistication, students need to know how it developed. Throughout this course, we will explore the historical background and philosophical principles embedded in the emergence of different anthropological theories as a way to explain them through their contexts of particular times, places, and personalities. Although this senior capstone course in anthropology presents the past and present development of anthropological knowledge, it does not cover the entirety of anthropological theory; we will rather focus on trends, which are directly acting in the development of classic and current epistemologies in the discipline.

The exposure to this diversity of ways to explain the social and cultural phenomena becomes a very productive scenario for the students to exercise the holistic explanatory nature of the anthropological discipline applied to the social and ideological contexts from which the different anthropological approaches emerged. Most of the students think that theory is arid, abstract, and has nothing to do with reality. At this point, most of the students know that anthropology’s strength is about revealing the intricacies embedded in cultural stereotypes. That’s the ‘mysticism’ that engages the students in this course: to unveil the intriguing social, political, economic and ideological tapestry intrinsic in the emergence of particular anthropological theories, as a way to ‘de-construct’ the stereotype of anthropological theory as dull, dry and an exercise in mental acrobatics.

Throughout the semester, students review key concepts in the anthropological arena such as structure, thought, culture, ethnography, history and social change, related to epistemological frameworks centered on the discussion of objectivity, interpretation and ethnographic representation. In sum, this course frames anthropology as a humanist discipline and provider of responses to social issues with a broad public impact. Students exercise different theoretical glasses to analyze, interpret and explain social and cultural phenomena such as social violence, ethnic clashes, or social inequalities.
Major Learning Outcomes
A. Identify different approaches in the analysis and understanding of anthropological concepts (i.e. culture, structure, agency, time, space, social change, representation.)
B. Reflect upon the limitations, challenges and repercussions of the diversity of theoretical frameworks they are exposed to in this course.
C. Learn about our discipline’s ancestors so we can better understand current theoretical approaches and trends in our field.
D. Examine critically the ways the anthropological knowledge learned can be applied to students’ own understanding of the social reality.

Structure and Requirements
The course is a combination of lectures and seminar. Lectures provide the introduction to major debates surrounding the readings; students are expected to engage in class discussions. Everyone must come to class prepared; discussion will often take the form of a formal debate of the issues read for that class session. All readings that are listed on the syllabus should be done prior to the class.

Reading Comments (30% of grade)
Reading comments consist of a paragraph or two describing your thoughts-reflection to the reading(s) for each session. Do not summarize, but rather elaborate your response to the reading. In addition, prepare 2-3 questions that you might ask your classmates or discuss yourself. You need to post your comments on Blackboard before class meeting. Bring your comments and questions with you to class.

Two Take-Home Exams (60% of grade, 30% each)
Each student will write two take-home exams based on several integrative questions, which will be distributed one week in advance. Questions on the exam will be drawn from the readings, lectures, and discussions. Your response must include the references you used.

Course Participation and Attendance (10% of grade)
You are expected to come to each session having read the assigned material. Informed participation by everyone in discussions is expected. Those who fail to attend often disrupt class. Your regular attendance will be noticed by the performance in your presentations and discussions. Notify the instructor of any planned absences. More than 3 absences will result in the subtraction of 10% of your grade. Please note that 10% is one letter grade.

Extra Credit
Occasionally, additional assignments will be given to monitor how well you are absorbing the material. These assignments are likely to become more frequent if students are missing the class or failing to participate. These assignments will receive a checkmark (for an average response) or a plus (for an excellent response). These marks become important at the end of the term. If your final grade is on the margin between two marks, the accumulated points earned on these assignments are used to adjust your grade up or down.

Please turn off all electronic devices in class (cell phones, Blackberries, ipods, etc.). You may not receive or send text messages during class. Personal computers are allowed only for taking notes. Any use of computers for other purposes will lead to a ban on all computers in the classroom. The professor reserves the right to alter this syllabus via class announcements or email to students.
PLAGIARISM POLICY
The Department of Anthropology does not tolerate plagiarism, cheating, or helping others to cheat. Plagiarism is defined as misrepresenting the work of others (whether published or not) as your own. It may be inadvertent or intentional. Any facts, statistics, quotations, or paraphrasing of any information that is not common knowledge, should be cited. Students suspected of any of these will be provided the opportunity for a hearing; if found guilty they can receive an automatic “F” in the course. In addition, I reserve the right to pursue further disciplinary action within the UNT legal system, which may result in your dismissal from the university. For more information on paper writing, including how to avoid plagiarism, and how to use citations, see http://www.unt.edu/anthropology/writing.htm. For information on the University’s policies regarding academic integrity and dishonesty, see the UNT Center for Student Rights and Responsibilities, http://www.unt.edu/csrr/.

NON-DISCRIMINATION POLICY
The Anthropology Department does not discriminate on the basis of an individual’s disability as required by the Americans With Disabilities Act. Our program provides academic adjustments or help to individuals with disabilities in its programs and activities. Attempts will be made to meet all certified requirements

STUDENT RESPONSIBILITIES
1. Treat class time as an opportunity to learn.
2. Arrive on class on time.
3. Complete assignments on time. There will be no exceptions.
4. Cite all research, text and image sources.
5. Participate in all class discussions and critiques.
6. Confront difficulties in your work in the spirit of learning, creative exploration, and personal growth.
7. Ask for help from your instructor when needed.
8. Respect your fellow students at all times.
9. Disruptive behavior, including inappropriate language and talking in class, is not tolerated. Students whose behavior is disturbing the class will be asked to leave and will be marked absent.

TEXTBOOK and READINGS

Additional readings will be assigned and posted in the Blackboard Page of the course.
