Contemporary Middle East: Society, Culture & Politics
ANTH 4701, Thursday, 6:30 – 9:20, Env. 115
Instructor: Dr. Mahmoud Sadri
Office hours: by appointment
Email: MSadri@mail.TWU.edu

Course Objectives:
This is an innovative approach to the study of the Middle East. This course will unfold in three expanding and concentric circle. First we will take a penetrating look into the history of the contemporary Islam though an innovative biography of an Iranian scholar, interspersed with explanations of the episodes of the protagonist’s life. Second, we will engage in a wider investigation of the history and culture of the modern Middle East through the lens of a work that examines the modern encounters that shaped the present Middle East and Islam. Third, we will widen the circle to include Islam and the advent of extremism that envelopes the Middle East and beyond. The three books then, will serve as spring boards for our discussions of the region. There will be a strong visual component to this course in the form of documentary and narrative films that illuminate the issues under discussion. Also, each session will have class discussion section as well. This part either echoes or contradicts the reading for that week.

Required Readings:
- Roy Mottahedeh, The Mantle of the Prophet
- Bernard Lewis, What Went Wrong?
- Khaled Abu El Fadl, The Great Theft
- Readings posted on BlackBoard or handed out in class
